Description of Round 6 ACSM Activities

Information, Education and Communication (IEC) activities play an important role in case detection, case holding and successful treatment of TB cases. IEC would follow a holistic approach by providing relevant information to each target group of patients and providers, and would employ appropriate and effective communication especially through improved interpersonal communication.

A vital area which is covered under the project are the IEC/ACSM activities, especially activities that focus on increasing ownership of the health programmes by the communities. Supporting the Intermediate Reference Laboratories in the three states would develop the capacity of the states to undertake not only EQA activities but also undertake mycobacterial culture and sensitivity testing. These would provide the necessary impetus to implement the MDR-TB treatment in the states which presently lack such services.

The mass media activities undertaken from the Central level contribute significantly to the IEC/ACSM efforts of the national programme. A media agency contract through the World Bank support would be responsible for carrying out mass media campaigns to create awareness on availability of TB services under DOTS strategy in the entire country including the states under this project. Though the cost of hiring of the agency is budgeted in the World Bank project, the benefits of such activities would be available in the GFATM project sites.
